

Five Rivers Anti-Slavery, Human Trafficking, and Unlawful Child Labour Policy

Introduction

Five Rivers is a responsible employer and recognises the Modern Slavery Act 2015 which came into force in October 2015. Five Rivers is committed to a work environment that is free from human trafficking, forced labour and unlawful child labour (collectively known as ‘human trafficking and slavery’). Five Rivers accepts that it has a responsibility for promoting ethical and lawful employment practices. This policy sets out the expected standards of behaviour and integrity that Five Rivers requires in relation to the Modern Slavery Act 2015 to prevent slavery and human trafficking.

Five Rivers is committed to a zero-tolerance approach to modern slavery and to acting with integrity in all its business dealings, relationships, and throughout the supply chain. It expects the same standards from all employees, suppliers, contractors, and those with whom it does business. This policy applies to all employees, sub-contract workers, consultants, and other persons doing business with Five Rivers.

Five Rivers will not knowingly use child labour or forced labour in any areas of work, production of goods and/or services it provides, nor will it knowingly accept supplies, products and/or services from suppliers that employ or utilise child labour or forced labour.

Rationale

Human trafficking and slavery are crimes under UK and International law. These crimes do exist to varying degrees in countries throughout the world. This policy statement defines Five River’s commitment to ensuring that human trafficking and slavery does not exist within its own business, but also details how Five Rivers will make efforts to eradicate the same from other businesses with whom it shall maintain a relationship. Five Rivers will take appropriate steps to ensure not only its own compliance but also that these requirements are followed by its suppliers, subcontractors and/or business partners. All suppliers and sub-contractors are therefore required to adhere to this policy statement.
